TEMPERANCE CAUSE.

A Large Meeting Last Night--Speeches by Dr. Sutherland and Mr. McLaren.

The Y. M. C. A. Meeting at Seattle--Return of the Delegates--All Delighted.

A large audience assembled last evening in the Y. M. C. A. rooms to hear the Rev. Dr. Sutherland and Mr. J. J. Maclaren, Q. C., speak on "Political and economic aspects of the temperance question." Rev. D. Fraser occupied the chair. After the meeting had opened with singing and prayer the speakers, both members of the Dominion Alliance in other provinces, were introduced by the chairman.

Dr. Sutherland was received with hearty applause. After referring to the pleasure which it had given him to find such activity among the temperance people of British Columbia he proceeded to say that there were few subjects upon which all could agree, and indeed he was not sure that the two who should address the meeting on this occasion were in thorough accord in all points. One perhaps would claim to be a little ahead of the other and it was for the people to see who should eventually reach the goal first. This method for removing the evil of drunkenness was of prohibiting the manufacture of liquors. People in past years had confined themselves to an endeavor to reform the drunkard that while new converts were being made a new supply of victims were also made. The temperance people had before them the injunction to pull the ox or the ass out of the pit which had fallen in on the Sabbath day, but when he came to fall in every day a wise man suggested that it would perhaps be better to fill the pit up. (Laughter and applause.) There was a heap of common sense in that. The politician says you must educate public opinion up to the temperance question. On any other, however, even if it involves the expenditure of millions of dollars by the country if they can get enough members in the House of Commons to pass it that is all the education of public opinion they want. (Hear, hear.) The effect of prohibitory measures on morals was pointed out. While the Scott Act was in force in Halton, at 11 sittings of the Assize Court, the Judge was presented with a pair of white gloves there being no calendar. (Applause.) Now that the Scott Act is abolished temperance people are waiting anxiously to see how long before unlicensed whisky will set the tide of crime toward that county again. The great trouble in obtaining legislation on this question is because the political parties were divided among themselves on it. The politicians declare that none can expect to succeed who stands on a single plank. There will of course always be a division on great issues, but the day will come, and the speaker expected to see it when there would be a cleavage of the political parties, on one side men drawn from both sides who place religion, honesty, principle and temperance above everything else, and on the other side that which is opposite to these. As matters stand now one party has tacitly declared that they are not in favor of prohibition; the other has said it cannot be made a plank in their platform. The position of both parties was that they could not afford to lose many votes, so that the temperance people by blending together would hold the balance of power and succeed in accomplishing that which they so much desired. (Loud applause.)

Mr. McLaren being introduced, came forward and was heartily received. He said no one need be disturbed by any theoretical difference between Dr. Sutherland and himself. They were working on the same lines with the same object in view. Referring to the tests of prohibition in the Eastern States, he stated that there were growing up in Maine and Vermont a population who knew absolutely nothing about strong drink unless they learned by visiting neighboring states (applause.) In Maine there were only two cities where the prohibition had not been as thoroughly enforced as any other enactments on the statute and these cities were Bangor and Portland. The latter was a seaport town and no doubt considerable illicit traffic was done in it. Yet he had been there for weeks without seeing a drunken man. The experience of the Dominion of Canada was that in P. E. Island where the most restrictive measures prevailed, the least quantity of liquor was sold. In British Columbia where the greatest laxity existed with regard to liquor laws, the greatest amount of liquor was consumed. P. E. Island's average was ¾ gals per head, British Columbia's 7¾ gals per head per annum. Local option was in force in Quebec yet Arcebishop Tacherean is asking for stringent measures. In Manitoba there is a stringent license law. Nova Scotia at last session took a step practically closing bars and consequently abolished treating, one of the most fruitful causes of drunkenness (applause). The measure was introduced by the temperance men of both parties and supported by all but three members of the legislature (applause). From 55 votes in favor of prohibition in the late parliament the number had increased to 70 in the present. With such a gain in the next the temperance members would be within two of the majority (applause). When Mr. Jamieson introduced his bill in 1887 Sir John Macdonald declared that if it passed he would resign, yet in the face of that threat there were found a large number of Conservatives who were independent enough to support the bill, and one of British Columbia's representatives was among the noble little band (applause). After referring briefly to a few other points Mr. McLaren concluded and was loudly applauded.

Mr. Shakespeare moved a vote of thanks which was seconded by Mr. Alex. Wilson, who made a characteristic speech which was well received. The meeting then adjourned.

An Indian Jeweler.

A Claoquot Indian was around town to-day procuring supplies to go into the jewelry business on the West Coast. The enterprising siwash is a son of Cedar Jim, one of the famous fighting chiefs of former days. He obtained a complete outfit for his business, including crucibles, ingots of silver, &c., with a view of supplying the wholesale trade. The principal article of manufacture will be those beautiful silver bracelets with which the maidens of the wood delight to bedeck themselves and which have heretofore been supplied almost exclusively by the skillful Hydahs of Queen Charlotte Islands.

Y. M. C. A. MEETING.

Proceedings of the Saturday's Meeting at Seattle, W. T.

The morning session of the convention, Mr. A. S. Burwell in the chair, opened with devotional exercises led by Mr. C. F. Seal, of Portland.

Dr. Reid, of Victoria, having the permission of the meeting to say a few words, bid the delegates an affectionate farewell and departed for his home.

The secretary of the convention being ill, Mr. G. A. Charnock of Vancouver, acted as secretary for the morning session. At 9:30 Mr. T. A. Harding, of Washington, D. C., spoke of international work. He explained that the international committee was composed of thirty leading business men of the United States and Canada, with headquarters at New York, who took great interest in the development of the work all over the continent, and not only gave their valuable time, but also large sums of money. This committee did not claim to have authority to dictate to the associations, but simply advised them.

Mr. C. S. Mason read a paper on state and district work. The state committee was composed of business men with their headquarters at Portland, Oregon, and held the same relation to state and district work as the international committee did to the work on the whole continent. He spoke of the great value to the work of a competent state secretary working as the servant of the state executive committee, and warmly endorsed Mr. Noel Jacks of California, as a man eminently fitted for the position of state secretary for the Pacific northwest. The state secretary's duties were to assist the general secretaries in their work. The name of Mr. Jacks was loudly applauded by the meeting and a subscription list opened to raise $1500, the amount required. Of this $1311 were subscribed and it was resolved to bring this matter before the afternoon session in order to raise the balance.

Mr. C. E. Frost, chairman of the executive committee, read his report which was very satisfactory in every way.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Mr. S. T. Dimmick of Tacoma read a paper on "How Can Neighboring Associations Help Each Other?" in which he said that a kindly welcome should be given to members of other associations.

Mr. Everett Smith of Seattle gave a paper on "The Gymnasium and the position it should occupy."

Mr. Noel H. Jacks of San Francisco was introduced as the newly appointed state secretary of the Pacific Northwest, and he was warmly greeted. In a few words he thanked the meeting and hoped that his appointment would do good and benefit the cause.

The selection of the place of meeting for the next convention was proceeded with, Walla Walla, Spokane Falls, Portland, Port Townsend, and Vancouver, B. C., being the candidates. After a ballot had twice been taken it was found that Vancouver had the majority of votes and by a resolution the choice was made unanimous.

Mr. A. G. Ansell read a paper on "How to Develope Active Workers from Active Members," which should be done by means of the Bible training class and with the help of the pastors of churches.

A paper on "Financial Support," by W. R. Walpole, financial secretary of Portland, in which he stated that the aim of each association should be made it self-supporting, and in presenting to the public a need of finances, it should be shown that a definite work was being done. There was a cause to present. Appeals should not be directed to any particular class, but all and every one should be asked to support the finances of the Y. M. C. A.

EVENING SESSION.

At the evening session in the Methodist Church Mr. Teague, of Victoria, led in the promise service.

Mr. S. M. Hauser of Astoria read a paper on the "Value of Evening Educational Classes," which was very interesting.

Mr. E. C. Frost, of Portland, gave an excellent address on "The Great 75 per cent." What he meant by the 75 per cent. was that percentage of young men who never go to church. Some people say that drink and obscene literature are the causes of ruining young men, but his opinion was that evil associations are the means of preventing a young man from continuing an upright course. The only way to reach these young men is by the Y. M. C. A. Bright, cheerful reading rooms, socials, members' receptions, educational and religious classes were the chief means to bring a young man under Christian influences.

The subscription list for the expenses connected with the state secretaryship was re-opened, and altogether over $1,800 was pledged.

GRAND FAREWELL.

Mr. W. Dee, one of the representatives at the Convention, returned last evening. He says the secretaries and delegates were treated royally by the people over there. The proceedings were closed on Saturday, and on Sunday evening a grand farewell was given the visitors, all the Protestant churches closing their doors and the congregations assembling en masse at the armory. Speeches were delivered by the secretaries and several of the delegates. The remainder of the delegates from this city, Vancouver and New Westminster will arrive to-night from Port Townsend where they remained for a day to give the workers there a wakening up.

R. W. Roper, who was one of the delegates from this city, also returned last evening. He was the guest of Judge Mercer, one of the leading workers on the Sound, who contributes liberally to the support of the cause.

"A TOUCHING COMPLAINT."

To the Editor of the Times:

Sir:—The communication you printed yesterday under the above heading is not founded on facts in as far as the St. Joseph's hospital is concerned. The Sister Superior, when she learned that the child, sick with scarlet fever, was without a mother to care for it, at once consented to admit it into the hospital; but as the father of the child subsequently gave to understand that he had engaged a woman to nurse the child at the hospital, the sister proposed that he should get the woman to nurse it at his own house until the separate rooms destined for such cases should be ready. After receiving the necessary instructions as to how he was to manage the case, the father retired quite satisfied and heartily thanked the Sister. But towards midnight some other party came to apply for the child's admittance, and of course was refused both on account of the unseasonableness of the hour and of the previous arrangement with the father. This other party is likely the one that makes the "touching" but untruthful complaint.

TO-DAY'S DISPATCHES.

Absurd Report About the Ottawa Cabinet and Our Defensive Condition.

A Small Civil War on the Mexican Border—Yellow Fever Epidemic in the South.

Ottawa, Sept. 25.—Members of the Dominion cabinet have been summoned to the capital in consequence of a dispatch from the Imperial authorities, through Lord Stanley, Governor-General, asking for information regarding the volunteer militia force and the defenses of Canada. The British government, it appears, realizing that Canada is semi defenceless, should trouble arise with the United States over the retaliation law, has asked for an extensive report in regard to the armed resistance the country could offer should there be trouble. The cabinet council will meet in the course of the week.

ANOTHER VERSION.

Washington, Sept. 25.—A special dispatch from Ottawa says that the cause for summoning the cabinet is the effect the signing of the Scott Chinese exclusion bill will have upon Chinese who are British subjects and living in Canada. If the Scott bill should become law it will keep them out of the United States The "probability is" the despatch says, "that Great Britain does not intend to allow the United States to exclude her subjects in such a summary manner and as usual in such cases it backs up its views in an emphatic manner."

JUDGE MATTHEWS ILL.

BAZAINE'S FUNERAL.

Madrid, Sept. 25.—The funeral of Bazaine took place yesterday. The hearse was followed by few mourners.

SAILOR KILLED.

San Francisco, Sept. 25—C. N. Peterson, a sailor, 35 years of age, on the ship James N. Smith, fell from the rigging to the deck last night and was killed.

STANLEY RELIEF.

YELLOW FEVER.

Raleigh, N. C., Sept. 25—Governor Scales to-day notified the chairman of the Board of Health at Jacksonville that no other refugee would be allowed to come into this State from districts infected with yellow fever.

New Orleans, Sept. 25—The President of the Board of Health has issued an order to the representatives of the various roads coming into this city, passing through or near the infected points, not to bring into the city any coaches in which refugees from the infected points have travelled north.

PESTH OPERA HOUSE BURNED.

Vienna, Sept. 25—The fire in the Royal Opera House at Pesth burned the place to the ground; loss over two million florins.

A BIG STRIKE.

Havana, Sept. 25—A general workingman's strike is in progress here. Nearly twenty-five thousand men are out. Troops are under arms in anticipation of trouble.

A ROBBER PARDONED.

Auburn, Tex., Sept. 26.—Chas. Catliff, a young train robber, serving a life sentence in prison here, has been pardoned by President Cleveland. Catliff was convicted of robbing the United States mail in February 1881.

THE RIO GRANDE ROW.

Austin, Sept. 25.—Rio Grande city is eighty miles from the nearest railroad station, and is extremely difficult to reach. Governor Ross has ordered the entire ranger force of Texas to proceed with all possible haste to the scene. The Mexicans number ten to one of white citizens, and there is no telling to what excess they will resort. Governor Ross also telegraphed to all the sheriffs of all the counties and to San Antonio Rifles, Belknap rifles, and Houston Light Guards to hold themselves in readiness to march at a moments notice.

Washington, Sept. 25—Acting Secretary Thomson this morning received the following from the Collector of Customs at Brownsville, Tex., dated 24th, regarding a fight between editor Garza, of Mexicano, and U. S. revenue officer Sebre, at Rio Grande City, in which Garza was killed: Sebree was only saved from lynching by the Mexicans by being placed under arrest. The situation at Rio Grand City is precarious, but is quiet to-day, pending a conference of a committee from the mob with the sheriff. Inspector Sebree and Deputy Marshall Dillard are still in Fort Ringgold.

Secretary Thompson this afternoon transmitted copies and telegrams received from the collector on the subject to the Acting-Secretary of War, with a request that he take such action as may be deemed necessary for the protection of life and property at Rio Grande City.

COWICHAN EXHIBITION.

To the Editor of the Times:

Sir,—Please remind your readers and the public in general, and the citizens of Victoria in particular, that we expect them to meet us at Duncan station on Saturday the 29th instant, as the Cowichan & Salt Spring Island Agricultural Society will hold their show for the first time at the above place. The new hall which is a fine building, is nearly completed, and will be ready in due time. The land-clearing and fencing which is going on fairly astonishes the natives. Now, a word to the Town Major, and no doubt he will see most of the ladies and young folks during the week and can tell them what they may expect to happen on Saturday next. First, a cheap ride on the E. & N. R., and a safe arrival in the centre of Cowichan District. Two hotels for their accommodation, a large new agricultural hall with rather rough grounds, and a good show. The C Battery band will likely be there to furnish plenty of good music. The hall will be cleared for dancing at 4 p. m. I believe arrangements will be made the coming week for a late train for Victoria and Nanaimo. Courteous treatment by the officers and members of the society, matrimonial alliances, and lots of fun. PIONEER.

Cowichan, Sept. 24.

—Two cases of fast driving were before the Magistrate this morning. One of the parties contributed $5 to the funds of the Corporation. The other case was adjourned.

SPORTING NEWS.

THE OAR.

O'Connor, the young Canadian oarsman, claims the title of champion sculler of America. Who, asks the Sporting Times, has he ever beaten to be given that distinction? Until he outrows John Teemer, the McKeesport oarsman, the latter will be recognized as America's champion.

FOOTBALL.

LACROSSE.

The Lacrosse team of this city received a formal challenge from Vancouver to play on Beacon Hill on the 6th October.

STREET RAILWAYS.

To the Editor of the Times:

Sir,—As an important proposition towards city improvement will shortly be laid before the public, in the shape of a system of street railways, it will be well well before placing in the hands of either corporations seeking the privileges of building and running of such railway, that the advisability of so important a step should be well weighed and considered. Apart from this consideration, the advisability of granting charters for a number of years for street railway purposes, we have the press in some of the eastern cities advocating the building of these lines by the City Corporation, and the leasing or letting of them to the most competent bidders from time to time. By this plan these railways would be always, as it were, under the immediate control of the City Council. Mistakes and abuses could be rectified without resort to litigation. There are many objections to keeping such undertakings in the hands of the City Corporation. That there would be jobbery in the contracts for the work, and in the subsequent management of the lines, is readily admitted. Still, with all these drawbacks we would secure the construction of the lines where most beneficial for the convenience of the public, and the opening up of new districts, and above all, they would be worked in the interest of the public, with a profit sufficient to pay the employees good wages and the running expenses of the system. Before granting any charter for a lengthened period these important points should not be lost sight of, and the pros and cons of the both systems should be thoroughly weighed and considered in the granting of so important a franchise to any company.

Tramway.

A VERY GENERAL OBJECTION.

To the Editor of the Times:

Sir,—Your morning contemporary has recently attempted to state, for purposes of explanation or refutation, the many objections which are offered to the establishment of a provincial university in British Columbia. From its list, however, it omits a principal one which obtains so widely, that it is really surprising, that even the senior organ, blindly prejudiced or influenced though it be, did not cancel it expressly, and, endeavour, to modify it, or explain it away altogether, as it tried to do the others.

I refer, of course, to the widespread doubt and distrust of the methods and of the sincerity of the present political head of the educational department. The public has seen the public school law of the province so construed and perverted as to serve the personal ends of the Minister of Education, without regard to the rights of the body of teachers duly examined and qualified. It fears, therefore, to trust the minister with further powers for the organization of the university, least it may prove a medium by which he may place favorites and protegés, untried and strangers to the province, in positions of emolument.

If the Minister of Education were less the artful, scheming politician, and more the educated philanthropist, zealous in his work, and really desirous for the educational and moral advancement of the province, with broad views and acknowledged executive ability, there would be fewer objections to the establishment of the university, and a more general desire for the means of a higher education for our youth.

The Adulteration of Sherry.

In the last issue of the United States Consular Reports, the consuls at Cadiz and Jerez de la Frontera return to the subject of the adulteration of sherry on which they recently reported unfavorably. Mr. Ingraham, of Cadiz, sends a translation of a circular from the Spanish Minister of the Interior to the civil governors of the province, directing prosecutions against the makers and vendors of adulterated wines in accordance with a Royal decree against adulteration. Adulterated wines are thus defined in the decree: (1). Natural wines contain impure industrial alcohol from husks (cascara) if they are not rectified and purified; (2). Salicylic acid and other antiseptic substances; (3). Foreign colored substance, those derived from the products of pit coal (sic) as well as of vegetable or other origin; (4). Artificial glucose, sugar from flour, a new wine; (5). Glycerine. In a report on the trade in sherry for last year, Mr. Ingraham says: "Old houses admit that the demand for low-priced wines compels them to yield reluctantly and compete for the market by using Berlin spirits for rectification at one-half the cost of Spanish grape alchol, which is sold at £25 to £30 a butt according to vintage, while German alcohol is selling at £13 a butt under sharp competition and long credit." Eleven thousand butts of this spirit were imported into Cadiz in 1886, and consumed in the province, the total average vintage of which was 75,000 butts. The Mayor of Jerez declares that all the misfortune of the wine growers arise from the use of the industrial spirits; that the cellars are mysterious laboratories, whose secrets no one is allowed to penetrate, and that the spurious usurps the genuine wines! It is said only 4 gallons of spirit are used in a butt of wine, but the proportion to import to the vintage is as 11 to 75, and Cadiz only imports about one-twentieth of that annually imported into Spain.

QUESTION OF "PATRONAGE."

"But it appears that it is the president of the road—who withdrew his ads and stopped his subscription—that the TIMES is enraged at."—Colonist.

The TIMES is not enraged at President DUNSMUIR; neither does it worship that individual after the manner of the Colonist. It is true Mr. DUNSMUIR withdrew his patronage from the TIMES, but what of that? The "patronage" never amounted to more than we receive from anyone of half a dozen merchants of the city. But why did Mr. DUNSMUIR withdraw his patronage? It is perhaps known to our contemporary that Mr. DUNSMUIR has a habit of doing that sort of thing when he cannot bulldoze people into his way of thinking. When in the House he declared he "wad'na touch it" (referring to a copy of the TIMES), he was, of course, only speaking for effect, for it was apparent that he was the best posted man in the Legislature in respect to what appeared in this journal. At that time he had "stopped his ads," and if our contemporary cannot recall the reason Mr. DUNSMUIR will perhaps assist his memory. Having afterwards repented of his folly, Mr. DUNSMUIR actually patronized THE TIMES again until the explosion in his coal mine, when THE TIMES gave publicity to the proceedings of the miners' meetings, which offended the Coal King and caused him once more to declare "Ye'll hae nane o' my bawbees." Mr. DUNSMUIR, on more than one occasion, threatened to "withdraw his ads" if THE TIMES continued its criticisms of his course as a politician, but that sort of "argument" did not deter the paper from doing its duty. We knew in advance that we could not serve the people and ROBERT DUNSMUIR, and that ROBERT DUNSMUIR was too much of a tyrant to patronize a newspaper that told the truth.

We shall be delighted to discuss this question of "patronage" with our contemporary and Mr. DUNSMUIR, and will willingly enter into particulars if they do not object. The Colonist, of course, cannot refuse to be judged by the standard it sets up for THE TIMES, and if it is prepared to stand by the contention that a newspaper's politics are influenced by a few dollars paid for business advertising it will have to define with some minuteness its own relations with the purse-proud autocrat who thinks that his money-bags are always invincible and that a threat to stop his "patronage" is the most convincing argument he can use.

MAJOR BARTELOTT.

The fate of Major BARTELOTT, who was murdered by his followers in the interior of the Dark Continent, has called forth various comments as to the disposition of the natives towards the expedition, and as to the uncertain fate of STANLEY. We have the Exeter Hall philantropists denouncing the late Major BARTELOTT as a cruel, tyrannical individual, who gloried in shooting down natives in their tracks—one who treated neither native nor European inferior with kindness—and attributing these failings to the training in the East India army. At the time of the mutiny this charge was laid with a show of foundation at the door of both the civil and military services of India, as carried on under JOHN COMPANY. Imperial rule altered things very much under this especial head. On the other hand we have the admirers of the deceased officer praising his energy and cleverness in the field of war and adventure. Beyond dispute, young BARTELOTT's manner is admitted to have been arrogant, which ended disastrously to himself, and in all probability did the cause of civilization in that portion of Africa a serious injury in the eyes of the natives. Military colonizers scarcely if ever succeed. CLIVE was a civil servant of the company, and conquered an empire by force of arms and a trade policy. The French and Germans, as military nations, almost fail in their colonial efforts. The latter's efforts may be said to be so far a total failure.

Although the Congo expedition is of a private nature, with KING LEOPOLD of Belgium at its head, supported by subscriptions from private individuals, yet it has countenance from the British Government, to which is given an informal responsibility by the Imperial war office, placing the expedition as a semi-official British undertaking. Some lay the blame of the murder of the deceased officer on the treachery of TIPPOO TIB, who, as is usual, with some of British fair play has his hosts of defenders.

The untimely death of a venturesome and promising young officer, is at all times to be deplored. At the same time the ready use of the modern revolver in our day, by officials, may lead to many unforseen disasters, engendering of a rancour, where friendship is desirable and politic. We in British Columbia need not go to the banks of the Congo for an example. A few months ago the action of an incompetent policeman, who does not seem to have possessed any of the qualifications of BARTELOTT, clothed with power from an equally incompetent executive, nearly brought on the country all the horrors of an Indian war, plunged us into expense and made us contemptable in the sight of the savage.

THE ROAD TO OFFICE.

This is the way to do it in approved Tory style—we quote from the Ottawa Free Press of 18th Sept.:

"Men desiring to obtain Dominion appointment should understand that the only way to make sure of a coveted office is to take the field in some close constituency in opposition to the party machine. Mr. Henry Merrick threatened to make trouble in North Leeds last provincial election, and he was made emigration agent at Belfast. Mr. Adam J. Baker was thrown overboard by the Tories of Russell, but announced that he would be a candidate anyway. Immediately Sir John made him immigration agent at Qu'Appelle. Now Mr. Evans, who persists in being a candidate in Cardwell, has been bought off with an appointment in British Columbia."

The tory followers understand their master's tactics, and believe that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. They evidently won't relinquish their hold till they are assured of a good grab, knowing the failings of "old to-morrow" and his promises. We have no objection to the energetic followers of the G. O. M. getting a fair share of the plunder—they are fairly entitled to their wages of servitude. But we do most emphatically object to the Province of British Columbia being made the Botany Bay of the Dominion, now that the political convicts have filled up the Northwest. We have men capable of filling all the fat Dominion offices in the province, and as willing as they are capable; and although we may fight and quarrel amongst ourselves, we won't be a party to permitting any outsider running off with our bone. We are content to have the devil we know in preference to the one we know nothing of, and therefore deprecate any attempt to foist played-out politicians on the civil list of our province.

SIR JOHN ON RETALIATION.

A New York Sun reporter had an interview with Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD, on the retaliation measures and the fishery question, when Sir JOHN gave the interviewer to understand that the Dominion Government, conscious of the justice of their cause and the unjust threats of our cousins across the border, will be content to patiently watch further developments, with that dignified composure which has been its characteristics from the beginning. We are told that the Government will act for itself in the matter without interference from Downing street, having such power without reference to the mother country. The fishing season being over now, there will be plenty of time for reflection till it opens again in May. It is not probable that President CLEVELAND will in the meantime make any hostile move to put his retaliatory measures into force, and before the expiration of the intervening eight months, things may assume a quieter aspect.

While complaining of the unfair treatment of Canada by the United States, SIR JOHN justly resents the imputation that there had been any unfair treatment toward American vessels. On the whole the interview is worthy of the Premier while preserving a proper dignity for the honor and rights of his country, he administered a well-earned rebuke to the unfair and unkind actions of the United States executive towards an unoffending neighbor. We differ from the Right Hon. gentleman in politics, but he deserves the thanks of the people of the Dominion for his patriotic demeanor in this affair.

VICTORIA INDUSTRIES.

The Columbia Match Factory of Mr. T. Hendry.

When THE TIMES was issuing a report of our city's industries, the Columbia Match Factory had been closed for a time, but was re-opened again a short time ago. As a description of the industries would not be complete without including this important branch, accordingly a TIMES reporter called at the factory situated on the Esquimalt road, Rock Bay, and was cordially received by the sole proprietor, Mr. Thomas Hendry, who kindly explained the mystery of match making—not in the matrimonial line, be it understood. The word match is a very ancient cognomen, being applied by the Romans to the end of a lamp from which the light emitted. We have the match wood of our forefathers, and the punk of the Indians; also the slow match of ancient artillerists. The present match, as we know it, however, is a modern invention, within the memory of our present generation. The first lucifer matches manufactured were complicated, and had to have a prepared surface to ensure ignition. The mode of manufacture has undergone many improvements since first invented about half a century ago. Their use has become almost universal, and the lucifer match of modern commerce may now be found in the fire-bag of the red man instead of the flint and punk of a few years back. The premises of the Columbia Match factory are neat and clean, occupying a very picturesque position on the shores of Rock Bay. On the ground floor we found the wood used, which is white pine from Comox, stored in cord wood lengths, for the purpose of seasoning. The stick of pine is sawed up into the required lengths or blocks by the means of a small circular saw, run by an 8 h.-p. engine. The blocks are then subjected to a pressure between rollers, in order to prevent splintering in the cutting operation. Being thus pressed they are taken in hand by a Chinaman, who levels off the surface with a draw knife. Another celestial subjects the block thus prepared to the cutter, worked by hand on the ratchet principle. The block is first cut in strips, then passed thro' the machine again and cut crosswise, forming the small splints. As the block passes beneath the cutter it assumes a semi-circular form, which form it retains throughout the other operations, till broke up into the bunches as we receive them from the grocers. The blocks of splints are then subjected to the drying process in a kiln in order to ensure their ignition from the inflammable composition in which they are dipped. In order to keep the several splints separated, so that each match receives its proper proportion of the composition, they are subjected to a drying operation on a hot pipe, thereby enabling the blocks to retain the semicircular shape. Everything is now ready for the dipping process. A boiling dish of sulphur is prepared, into which the blocks are dipped, then dried, which is done in a few minutes. A composition, consisting of whiting, glue, chloride of potash, sulphur and phosphorus being prepared, the blocks are dipped in it, receiving a coating of the composition. They are then placed in the dry room, and when ready, are taken in hand by a couple of Celestials, broken up into packages, rolled in light tissue paper, packed in grosses and are then ready for the market. Such is the simple mode of manufacture of an article which the life of the present day cannot afford to do without.

Mr. Hendry employs in his factory four Chinamen, who receive each about $45 a month. We may cry out as much as we wish about Chinese labor, but the match dipping process of match making is not fit employment for white men. The fumes in the packing and dipping rooms were almost stifling. The goods turned out by this factory find a ready market throughout the province, but are handicapped by the cheap Chinese labor of San Francisco, which Mr. Hendry deprecates very much. There are no fears entertained as to eastern competition. The local manufacture of matches is confined to this establishment, which turns out an article superior to the foreign or eastern product. Eddy's matches made at Hull, Que., the universal "lucifer" of the east, is large, cumbous and uncertain, and in many ways is an inferior article to that made by Mr. Hendry. The trade is a growing one, and capable of wide expansion. Mr. Hendry has the energy and ability to extend it, and we were pleased to know that along with our other manufacturers he intends to assist in retaining the British Columbia market for British Columbia manufactures.

OUR TOWN MAJOR.

An Essay on Gambling and Who Engage in It—Our Ensign.

The half column of matter furnished to the readers of the Colonist in its Sunday's paper on gambling, exposes a sad state of affairs. The Major has often written of gambling. That the practice is vicious is readily admitted, yet The Major was told that the gamblers kept business alive in Victoria; that the gamblers were our gentlemen of leisure. Men have been pointed out to him, who, by that mean, vicious, practice and dexterity in the art, have acquired riches and position in society. Gambling keeps our high-toned in a state of dependence, habituates them to vile companions, and by losses sustained, forces them to, in their turn, prey and use their infamous dexterity upon others. "Who is that person?" often asked the Major. "Oh, he's Mr. So-and-so, a very nice man indeed; a great gambler; very much thought of, I assure you." So, you see, the example set before the rising generation. We, from the Police Magistrate down, said gambling was carried on everywhere; by Chinese, white and Siwash alike. Gambling is as indigenous to Victoria as moss, lichen, or rose bushes. It is fostered and encouraged by high and by low, rich and poor, law givers, law preservers and law breakers alike. Judges, doctors, councillors, attorneys, and even preachers, are said to take a hand for a jack pot now and again. As a moral people, we are up to our eyes in it.

Victoria stands not alone. Card playing need not be looked upon as the only gambling. Have we not our mining speculators, our land grabbers, our politicians, and a host of others joined by a noble army of laymen gambling for all they are worth, not caring whose shares may be down as long as their own are advanced. In this respect clergymen are not the least vicious, risking their little all sometimes with a view to make a provision for a growing family. Precluded as they are from engaging in legitimate business, they are forced to gamble in stocks and shares, and become the worst kind of gamblers. On such the effects can be nothing but pernicious.

The low gambling, card playing as carried on in Victoria is the remnant of old mining days. It is both encouraged and connived at. These facts are patent to any observer. What is the result? Our youth's minds are taken from business, and habits of idleness are acquired. Cursing, avoricious, debased, inhuman natures the fruit. As we sow, so shall we reap, saith the scripture. At present gamblers, their associates and suppo ters are the masters of the situation.

Such being the acknowledged state of affairs, we have idleness and vice as the proper qualification for positions public or private. The law is best interpreted by eluding, perverting and confounding it, as in a late case before the city magistrate. Our civic and provincial enactments are blurred and blotted by favoritism and corruption. There is no perfection necessary for procurement of public position; men are not distinguished on account of their talents, judges for ability, senators for love of country or lawyers for wisdom. British Columbia is a mining country, and a mining country it will probably remain. A healthy, contented agricultural population would tend much to bring forth the fruits of our better nature; for the man who tills the soil by the sweat of his brow is the most contented, free, liberal, hospitable and religious of all the miserable mortals that nature permits to cumber a land that should be a paradise.

The other day, for the first time, the Major saw the ensign of the Queen City. It floated at half-mast from the pole of the civic heap of brick that cumbers the corner of Pandora street. It was intended to convey an idea of mourning, and mournful enough it would look away up at the peak. The flag was already in mourning; its dark border around a field of blood. In fact it looked piratical. There was no apparent reason in the world for the legend "City Hall." Any one ever so little acquainted with Victoria, would have known that much without being told. The flag, the pole, and that brick conglomeration are well mated; but not either mated or suited for the proud position of the beautiful city they are supposed to represent.

Rev. Mr. Ladner returned here with his family last Sunday night from Carlton, St. John, N. B.

The town has once more resumed its normal condition after the excitement of the baseball tournament and C. P. R. picnic.

The Ashcroft annual races will be held on October 18th and 19th. About $300 will be offered in prizes. Posters and programmes will be circulated next week.

The tender of McGregor & Sons for erecting the first part of the Church of England has been accepted by the building committee. The building will be proceeded with immediately. Offers have been received for the old building and site, but it cannot be parted with until the new church is ready for service.

Sore Eyes

The eyes are always in sympathy with the body, and afford an excellent index of its condition. When the eyes become weak, and the lids inflamed and sore, it is an evidence that the system has become disordered by Scrofula, for which Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best known remedy.

Scrofula, which produced a painful inflammation in my eyes, caused me much suffering for a number of years. By the advice of a physician I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. After using this medicine a short time I was completely

Cured

My eyes are now in a splendid condition, and I am as well and strong as ever.—Mrs. William Gage, Concord, N. H.

For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and was unable to obtain any relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine has effected a complete cure, and I believe it to be the best of blood purifiers.—C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H.

From childhood, and until with a few months, I have been afflicted with Weak and Sore Eyes. I have used for these complaints, with beneficial results, Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and consider it a great blood purifier.—Mrs. C. Phillips, Glover, Vt.

I suffered for a year with inflammation in my left eye. Three ulcers formed on the ball, depriving me of sight, and causing great pain. After trying many other remedies, to no purpose, I was finally induced to use Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

By Taking

three bottles of this medicine I have been entirely cured. My sight has been restored, and there is no sign of inflammation, sore, or ulcer in my eye.—Kendal T. Bowen, Sugar Tree Ridge, Ohio.

My daughter, ten years old, was afflicted with Scrofulous Sore Eyes. During the last two years she never saw light of any kind. Physicians of the highest standing exerted their skill, but with no permanent success. On the recommendation of a friend I purchased a bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which my daughter commenced taking. Before she had used the third bottle her sight was restored. Her cure is complete.—W. E. Sutherland, Evangelist, Shelby City, Ky. tf

"SHE IS MY WIFE."

What did it mean?

The face vanished in an instant. As quickly as she could collect her senses, Shirley followed Mr. Morrison out the hallway. She went around in the porch to the window where the face had been. The master was nowhere about. No living creature was there. She stepped out upon the lawn beyond, and peered about under the starlight. She saw nothing, heard nothing.

All was night and silence.

So still it was out there, so entirely all nature seemed unconscious of anything unusual, that Shirley could almost have believed nothing unusual had happened, and that she had imagined the face in the glass. There was a dim light inside the room, a brighter light outside in the porch. Might not the optical laws of refraction and reflection, aided by a crooked pane of glass, have twisted the image of some very commonplace object into that distorted, demoniac shape? She had read of such things.

At any rate, Shirley was not one to fret herself unnecessarily. She had had so many real worries in her life that she never went out of her way to hunt up unreal ones. Above all and before all, too, there was the supreme comforting thought, if anything was wrong, he, the master, would set it right. He would see that no harm came to her.

That was the thought in her mind as she went back inside the cottage, and to her own room.

The room, it will be remembered, was upon the ground floor.

The girl sat down beside the low, broad window. She was too restless, too happy to sleep. She said over and again to herself: "Fate has been very good to me, after all. I never believed such joy was to be for me, Shirley Carstone."

The master loved her. He had told her so. That was enough. No vision of guile, of treachery or of trouble crossed her thought. Her noble, innocent nature saw no falseness, no weakness in those she lived. She trusted them wholly. Yes, to the world's end.

Looking down the valley into the years that were to come, Shirley saw only brightness. Perplexities would come perhaps. Her hands would still be full of work, that she knew. Nay, as the world went, it might be long before he could come and claim her. She even thought of that. What then? The master loved her. That knowledge would be a strange, sweet presence that walked beside her day by day to the end, turning her heavy load into lightness. She laughed in the face of storm, of darkness, of the deadly lightning. The sweet, magic presence that walked evermore beside her would touch them and turn all her life into blue sky and rose cloud.

And her poem? The intense girl heart gave a glad bound. Half her inspiration had seemed gone when the master left her under the willows that day long ago. Now it came back. Now she would indeed write her poem. She would prove herself worthy of such a lover. He should be so proud of her, in the blessed years to come!

Rapt in her sweet visions Shirley sat there hour after hour. Morning was at hand. The mysterious thrill of the coming day quivered in the dark air. A timid bird chirped faintly. The breath of lilies swept in at the open window.

Shirley started up, smiled and threw herself upon her bed, dressed as she was. She had spun her web of thought out for the time. In five minutes she was in the land of dreams.

Shirley was a sound sleeper. The fashion of "nervous" young lady was just coming in. Shirley was not of that kind. She had a clear conscience and a good digestion, heaven be praised.

Therefore when a human shape trod catlike over the low window sill and into the room, she did not waken.

The first knowledge Shirley had was an awful consciousness that she was dying of suffocation. A great weight was upon her chest. Something was pressed over her mouth and nostrils, stifling her, swift and deadly. She tried to breathe, she tried to cry out. In vain. She struggled. She was lapped from head to foot in some heavy covering that made it impossible for her to use her hands or arms. She fought blindly a moment or two, and then gave over.

Death was almost there, she knew. The master, would he ever know how she died? In the last gleam of consciousness, a foolish tale of her childhood flashed through her memory. A cat had sat upon a child's breast, it was said, and drawn the breath from its nostrils, and so suffocated it. Was it a cat upon her breast?

Then she remembered no more.

But just in the nick of time, the instant before it would have been too late forever, a man sprang in at the window. The man was Mr. Morrison. With giant strength he seized the creature upon the bed and flung her off. It was a woman, with waxy white face and wild, demoniac eyes. He snatched the pillow and a heavy covering from Shirley's senseless form. He lifted her, he fanned her with his hand, called her his Shirley, his darling, he implored her to speak to him.

The wild woman flew at him like a panther. She tore his face with her nails. She buried her teeth in his hand to the bone.

Once more he mastered her by main strength and dragged her away from the bed. Two strong men had followed him in through the window. One of them carried a straitjacket. He gave her into their hands. It was with difficulty that even they could hold her.

Shirley opened her eyes. The wild woman saw it, and made as if she would spring at her again. But the two keepers had got her into the straitjacket.

Mr. Morrison motioned them to be gone.

"Take that devil away," he said, "before I crush the life out of her!"

The wild woman snarled at him like a savage beast. The keepers forced her out through the doorway. As she went she gave George Morrison a last look of helpless rage, and muttered:

"I hate you! And you would marry me!"

Shirley heard her say it. She lived over the horror of those few moments in her dreams, sometimes in after years, and would waken to find herself standing upright, shrieking frightfully, her brow wet with drops of cold perspiration.

She had heard the wild woman mutter:

"I hate you! And you could marry me!"

The master stood still by the door with a deathly pale face, and blood dripping from his hand. A streak of blood coursed down his cheeks. Shirley turned her eyes on him. She was quite in her senses now.

"Who is that woman?" she said.

The concentrated gall and wormwood of all humanity was in his voice as he answered:

"She is my wife!"

Then a fearful silence followed. He broke it.

"Well, Shirley, you don't congratulate me on my wedded bliss?"

She gave him a terrible look.

"You have deceived me," she said.

"I have. It is true I saved your life a moment ago, but that is nothing. I have let you believe a falsehood. And my name is not George Morrison. It is Philip Dumoray. Perhaps you will be interested to know it."

The dare devil of his reckless youth was uppermost in him again now. He strode across and stopped beside her with his white, blood streaked face and wounded hand. He stood so close to her that the blood from his hand dropped and stained the sleeve of her white dress. She shrank from him with horror. He went on.

"I have deceived you all along. I am a married man—husband of the angelic creature who so nearly murdered you awhile ago."

The master was the master no longer, not even of himself. A savage oath broke from his lips. Shirley could not speak. She recognized him feebly to go. He did not heed it, but talked on:

"She almost killed me once, in the same way. They have had her in the mad house, on the hill, for nine years. I come here once a year to see that she is well treated and wants for nothing. That is what I came here for now. Last night she got away. Nobody knew it till you saw her at the window. I gave the alarm and searched for her with two attendants all night after I left you. I was afraid she would do some devilitry. I never thought of harm to you, though, good God!"

Then he broke into wild anger again.

"Go, only go!" said Shirley, faintly.

"Well, I will. But I will come back again."

The rose she had worn in her hair lay upon the floor, crushed and trampled. He stooped and picked it up and carried it away with him.

Was not that a morning for them both, after such an evening?

Shirley had only one thought—to get away, and that quickly and forever. A mad desire to fly to the uttermost parts of the earth, where she would see nobody she ever knew; above all, where Philip Dumoray would never find her again. That was the only wish she was conscious of.

The work which she had come to do was done. The stir and bustle of the morning was on now. All about her she heard it. A train left early which would take her homeward. She was weak and trembling, so that she could scarcely rise, yet she hurried her preparations. She was in feverish haste to be gone. She had been so happy in that cottage, happier than ever in her life before. But now it was hateful to her. Only let her go away, away.

It wanted yet an hour till train time when Shirley was ready for her departure, yet she made haste to be gone. In the cheerless, foggy dawn she had herself taken to the station. How utterly cheerless, how dreary it was! It was a morning to take the stiffening out of a human being.

"SHE'S MY WIFE."

Shirley waited for the train. She could not restrain her impatience. She walked up and down the platform in the fog. She shivered with cold, she, the warm blooded, merry Shirley. Her knees trembled beneath her with weakness, but her will kept her up. There is nothing so good as a strong will.

Well, at last, in fifteen minutes it would be train time. She looked at her watch. It was very chilly. She disliked to go back into the little waiting room. It was full of giggling girls, smirking youths and stupid women. In the unhappy, unreasonable mind in which she was, how she hated them!

Nevertheless, she was chilled to the bone. She turned to go inside, and came face to face with Philip Dumoray!

He had been to the cottage and had followed on after her. His injured hand was bound up and carried in a sling. His torn, disordered clothing had been replaced by a well made toilet. He would have been neatly attired if he had dressed himself for the scaffold. There was dandy enough about Philip Dumoray for that. His face was still very pale, but firm and composed. He looked reproachfully at Shirley.

"Why did you go away when you knew I wished to see you again?"

"Why did you come here after me when you knew I did not wish to see you?"

"I did not know it," he replied, simply.

"Then you ought to have known it. You saved my life. I ought to thank you for that, I suppose. But I don't. Life will not be so sweet or pleasant to me hereafter that I should cherish a desperate desire to hang to it through thick and thin."

"Shirley," said he, "there is something I have to tell you. It is a wretched story. I ask you to bear with me and listen to it."

"I don't wish to hear it," she answered, coldly.

"But I must tell you," he said.

"My train is coming," said Shirley. "There it is at the curve. Good morning, Mr. Dumoray."

He laid his unwounded hand upon her arm, not very gently, if the truth must be told. The gentle master was not in a gentle mood that morning.

"You shall not go until you hear me," he exclaimed. "Shirley, if you don't stop I'll"—

"You'll what?" she retorted.

"Shirley, your father was my friend. By the memory of your father, grant me this one favor. It is the last request I may ever make of you."

The train stopped, gathered up its passengers, and went on, and Shirley was not among them. She led the way into the railway waiting room.

"Well, what is it you wish to say to me?" she asked. Her manner was as indifferent as if the last night had never been.

"I cannot tell you here," he said.

"Here or not at all," she answered. "Don't ask me to go back to that wretched house."

"So be it then," he replied. He had hoped—the Lord knows what he had hoped. It was true all was over now, all the possibilities he had dreamed of in that brief, mad hour of the night before. Was that a century ago, in some other state of existence?

There was nothing for them now. But if Shirley only knew his history, only could understand how he had struggled against fate, she might be not so hard. There might be a little less suffering for them both. If he could have her alone, and tell her, she would be gentler. Nay, he might even hope to be forgiven at last. But she had willed it that he should speak to her here, and speak he would.

So there, in the wretched waiting room, he narrated his miserable story, not abating one jot. He told her of the fire, of his twin boys, how strangely he had lost them, how he had searched the world over for them. He told her, too, of the devilish suspicion that had been set afloat by his wife's mother, and how at last all men turned against him.

"Wherever my name was heard," he said, "that vile slander followed me, till it drove me to desperation. I went away where no one knew me. I changed my name, in hope to find some peace. I was wrong. I should have stayed there, in that very spot, and faced my enemies, and lived it down, though I died of starvation."

"Yes, that is what you should have done," said Shirley.

"But I did not. There was no one to turn to. I had no friend. I did not know. I came to Linwood. In your happy home I met your father—and you. It was like paradise to me, after the life I had known. I was drawn to you first by your intellectual gifts, greater than I had believed could be in a woman. You liked me, too, you know that. You lingered about me with your light hearted, sunny nature, your sweet, frank ways, month after month. And then before I knew it, heaven forgive me! I loved you. How I loved you, even then!"

"Yet you deceived me," said Shirley, mournfully. "I would have died for you and you deceived me."

"I could not tell you that horrible story—how could I? If you had known it, you, too, might have turned against me. That was exactly what I could not bear. I read you like an open book, Shirley—you, the soul of purity and truth. You could not have assuaged your feelings if you had tried. I read that you were beginning to care for me. I knew it, and the knowledge was very sweet to me. Forgive me, Shirley, that I tell you of it now."

"I can forgive anything in a friend, I think, but want of frankness," she replied in a dull tone.

He winced a little and was silent. Presently he went on:

"I thought when I came to Linwood that I had overcome the weakness, the passionateness of my boyhood. So I had—so it would have been if I had never seen you. All was under my feet, I thought. But I met you. Then for the second time in my life I ran away. Only there I was weak; only there I feared to trust myself. In all else I tried to be what you thought me. I suppose a man may be forgiven for being human, Shirley?"

He paused. She did not speak. She was hurt to the soul. He continued, speaking in low, hurried tone:

"Ever since I left you, there is not a day or a night that I have not thought of you. I have dreamed what life might have been to me had I been free. As it was, you have been like a star to me. I have been true to to you in every word and thought. I have striven to keep myself pure and high in thought, to make my life helpful to others. Then, if ever the time was when I should be free, though it were fifty years, I could look honestly into your dear eyes and tell you—I have come to lay my heart at your feet. And so I would have come."

Then there was silence. Nothing broke it save the ticking of the clock in the little station. At last the master said:

"I am going now, Shirley. Good-by."

She held out her hand; it was death cold.

"I think you have broken my heart," she said, "but I forgive you."

That was their parting.

TELEGRAPHIC NEWS.

London, Sept. 24—The Daily News has become alarmed at the evident intention of the advocates of governmental endowment of denominational schools to pursue a vigorous policy in behalf of their cause when parliament reassembles, and implores the liberals to begin an agitation against it. The situation, the News says, is one of extreme danger, since it is undeniable that there is a large sectarian majority in the house of commons and the question has no political features. The Parnellites will obviously join hands with the tories in pushing the measure through unless the liberals at once make it plain to them that if they persist in supporting the education measure the support of the liberal party to the home rule cause will be withdrawn.

ANOTHER NIHILIST CONSPIRACY.

Russian refugees at Berne have received advices from Russia giving an account of a recent attempt to assassinate members of the imperial family. While some workmen were engaged in preparing for acceptance for another official the room in the palace of the Grand Duchess Catherine Michelovna, formerly occupied by her secretary, General Hartman, they found a bomb concealed beneath a pile of documents. One man picked it up, but it slipped, and falling upon the floor exploded. Both of the man's legs were shattered to atoms, and the furniture and windows of the room were completely destroyed. The other men were thrown down but escaped injury. Advices state that the newspapers were immediately forbidden to mention the occurrence.

THE LATE MARSHAL BAZAINE.

The death of ex-Marshal Bazaine has created great surprise, although it was known that his health had been very bad since his serious illness of a year ago. Nothing had been said or published about him lately. His exile has been spent for the most in a condition bordering upon squalor, and the little money which came to him from time to time was intercepted by some of the few persons who adhered to the belief that he was a victim of circumstances.

A FAMOUS PASTER.

Dr. Tanner Fresh From Mexico With Some New Ideas.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—Dr. H. S. Tanner, who became famous about eight years ago by fasting forty days in Clarendon Hall, New York, arrived in Chicago yesterday from New Mexico. He is apparently in perfect health, and his girth is such as to suggest anything except abstinence from food. About the last words from the doctor previous to his arrival here were that he was in New Mexico living upon a purely vegetable diet. At present he eats two meals a day in summer and one meal a day in winter.

In an interview he said that he had been in Mexico for four years pursuing investigations into the subject of suspended animation, or counterfeit death. He is convinced that large numbers of people are annually buried alive all over the world, and, from the study of various cases, and the records of societies on the subject, in Holland and elsewhere, he is convinced that so subtle is the principle of life that no one can undertake to say that it is extinct until decomposition—the only sure sign—has set in. He declares that the dead in this country are buried with indecent, with criminal haste and that burials of persons who are not absolutely dead are murders.

The doctor is also pursuing another branch of semi-suspended animation, viz, Hibernation. He declares that bears and other hibernating animals do not use their lungs during the hibernating season, and he is convinced that man can hibernate. He refers to the long trances of the Hindoo adepts, accomplished through long seasons of fasting, and declares it to be his belief that these trances are merely seasons of hibernation. The doctor says he is studying with a view to making some experiments in this line, and that the time may come when he will permit himself to be sealed up in an air-tight coffin and laid away until such time as he shall designate for it to be opened.

A Warning.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the throat and lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of tubercle germs into the system and when these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the head, causing catarrh. Now all this is dangerous and if allowed to proceed will in time cause death. At the onset you must not with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your throat, lungs or nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief. *

—D. Sullivan, Malcolm, Ontario, writes: "I have been selling Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for some years, and have no hesitation in saying that it has given better satisfaction than any other medicine I have ever sold. I consider it the only patent medicine that cures more than it is recommended to cure." *

—There are Cheap Panaceas for various human ailments continually cropping up. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure has no affinity with any of these. Unlike them, the article is derived from the purest sources, is prepared with the utmost chemical skill, and is a genuine remedy and not a palliative for Biliousness, Constipation, Kidney troubles, impurity of the blood, and female complaints. *

—Mr. R. C. Winlow, Toronto, writes: Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery is a valuable medicine to all who are troubled with indigestion. I tried a bottle of it after suffering for some ten years, and the results are certainly beyond my expectations. It assists digestion wonderfully. I digest my food with no apparent effort, and am now entirely free from that sensation, which every dyspeptic well knows, of unpleasant fulness after each meal. *

To Raise a Sunken Bark.

Fifteen years ago the bark Emily Farnham was wrecked on Destruction Island, near Cape Flattery, laden with a cargo of railroad iron, consigned to the Northern Pacific Company. Recently a searching party has been organized in San Francisco to locate and raise her. Her cargo was valued at $60,000.

Sensational News.

This morning's Colonist contains a lengthy report of an alleged poisoning case, which is sensational in the highest degree. The facts of the case are these: A young woman arrived in this city a few days ago from Seattle. She had domestic troubles in that city caused by the rascality of a drunken man, and on account of the worry and brain troubles was given a bottle of medicine containing chloral, of which an overdose was taken in mistake. A medical man was called in and means taken by which the young woman was restored to health. The poor woman has had trouble enough without a newspaper heaping on her head the charge of attempting to commit suicide. Acquaintances in the locality say that the family are very respectable and can only condemn such freaks of journalism which surely emenated from a cranky news gatherer.

Election of Officers.

Columbian Royal Arch Chapter No. 120, G. R. S., held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon in the Masonic Temple, Douglas street, when the financial report was received and the following officers elected:

Hon J W and Mrs Trutch will shortly leave for England to spend the winter.

Mrs Michael Young was a passenger for Tacoma this morning on the steamer Alaskan.

J K Suter, editor of the Mainland Guardian, arrived on Monday afternoon from Westminster.

Major General Middleton will arrive on Thursday night and will inspect "C" Battery and the local corps.

B W Pearse and wife, who leave for England next month, expect to be absent for two years. "Fernwood" has been taken by Mr Dumbleton, Sr.

Mrs A Hart will leave on the 7th of next month to visit friends in Montreal, Boston and New York and will be absent all winter.

W C Ward and wife, B W Pearse and wife and Miss Maud Dunsmuir leave on the 11th of next month for the old country, where they will spend the winter.

The Marquis of Queensberry, who is a retired lieutenant in the navy, Mr Richard Flewen, England, and Mr I Macdonald Cameron, M P for the Wick Burghs, in the north of Scotland, arrived from San Francisco this morning. Mr Cameron is a Gladstonian, and defeated the sitting member, Mr. John Pinder (now Sir John, of telegraphic fame) who is a Liberal Unionist. The Wick Burghs have never had a contest except between Liberals, for no Tory ever ventures to contest, even when two Liberals are in the field for one seat. Mr Macdonald is an Ayershire man, with a scientific turn of mind, and has filled the position of instructor in the Chemical Research Laboratory in the School of Mines.

Miss Lottie Dod, the champion lady tennis-player of England, is only eighteen years old, but she has handled the raquet ever since she was ten years of age. Miss Dod, is a picture of robust English girlhood. She is above the average height of women, with her head set well upon her shoulders. She is unusually dark for an English woman, her hair and eyes being black as the raven's wing. For the last eight years this athletic young lady has travelled all over England, Scotland and Ireland wresting the trophies from local champions, until finally she wrested the championship of all England from Miss Maud Watson. Now there is some talk of inviting Miss Dod to Staten Island to see what she can do against Miss Adele Robinson, the champion lady tennis-player of the United States.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

The Society now Fully Organized and Ready for Work.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Victoria society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals held last night at the Indian Harrows office, the constitution and by-laws were finally passed. The constitution provides that there will be annual, life and honorary members. Any person, (ladies included), may become a member upon payment of $1 per annum in advance, and the payment of $25 will constitute a life member.

The officers are: Ven. Arch. Scriven and T. R. Smith, H B. Co., Vice-Presidents; Sec.-Treas. W. H. Mason; Executive and Vigilant Committee, Hon. J. H. Turner, F. S. Barnard, Dr. Duncan, C Battery, J. S. Yates, J. Jessop, W. Jensen, Alex. Wilson, E Mallandaine, R. H. Hall, George Williams, John Ward, C. F. Moore, E. Fawcett and R Jones. The presidency, which will be an honorary position, is yet to be filled.

The Society will see to the enforcement of the Dominion statutes bearing upon the work they have in hand. Any stipendiary magistrate or justice of the peace in the district where the offence takes place has jurisdiction. In addition to anything the informer is entitled to under the act, the Society will pay the sum of $10 in each case where a conviction is obtained. The police will no doubt be a great assistance to the Society, and will bring every case coming under their knowledge before the officers. The membership promises to be large. Parties wishing to join the Society are requested to give their names to any of the officers or committeemen above named.

SEALER MAGGIE MAC.

A Boat Belonging to the Schooner Fired on by Aleuts.

The sealing schooner Maggie Mac, Capt Dods, arrived this morning with 1424 seal skins. A report was in circulation in this city for some days that a boat belonging to the vessel was fired on by natives of Russia, and the arrival of Capt. Dods was awaited before giving the information publicity. This morning a reporter of The Times waited on Capt. Dods and was informed that he knew nothing of the affair. From information gained through other sources, it was ascertained that in July a party of hunters from the Maggie Mac were sealing off the Russian coast. They noticed what was supposed to be a walrus on the shore and pulled in to obtain a shot at it. When they arrived near the shore it was discovered that the object was an Aleut, armed with a rifle. He immediately opened fire on the boat; another shot followed from the shore and one of the men in the boat was struck in the thigh. The boat's crew immediately pulled for the schooner, barely escaping with their lives. The wounded man is staying at the Vancouver House, Yates street. It was found impossible to obtain precise information regarding the locality, but the men all agree that they were near Russian territory.

IN VICTORIA'S STREETS.

A Young Lad Roams Around for Two Months.

Last night at 8 o'clock a reporter of The Times noticed a crowd of small boys on Douglas street, near the Club Theatre. One of the lads, a boy about 13 years of age, was held by a colored man who stated that the boy ran away from his home in this city last July and was roaming the streets ever since. He was provided with food by a number of small boys, and slept in barns and empty houses during that long period. His parents reside on Humboldt street. The street gamin would not return home with the young colored man but was induced to accompany him to the parental roof through the threats of being locked up. He is known amongst the large crowd of small boys which assembled around as "Buck" Lawson. The Council should pass a by-law to keep children off the streets after nine o'clock at night.

THE ODD FELLOWS.

Business of the Sovereign Grand Lodge Meeting at Los Angeles.

At the session of the Sovereign Grand Lodge, Los Angeles, California, Grand-sire John H. White reports to the end of the year, 1887, which stands out as the most prosperous in the history of the order, that not only has the increase in members been larger than ever before, but the revenue received is larger by hundred of thousands, and the expenditures for relief are vastly increased over any former period. Not only this, but the order has increased largely in wealth, power and influence. The condition of the order, is as follows:

		INCREASE.
Subordinate lodges	8,331	228
Lod e institutions	63,331	6,425
Lodge members	555,722	25,422
Total relief	$2,358,766.02	$ 126,441.52
Total revenue	$6,065,091.42	$ 405,819.05
Rebekah Lodges	1,498	153
" Sisters	40,389	6,431
" Brothers	29,176	5,843
" Relief	$ 17653.81

A lodge has a right to donate money from its general fund for the benefit of an Odd Fellow's home.

A lodge may invest its surplus funds in the stock of a bank, loan and trust company, or other moneyed enterprises.

Decision 56, reads, when "a Noble Grand makes a decision upon the meaning of a part of the Subordinate Lodge Constitution, an appeal therefrom to the lodge is allowable, and the N. G. must put the question to the lodge as to whether it will sustain the decision of the N. G., if his decision be reversed, then an appeal can be had to the proper authority as provided by the local law. In our order there are no autocrats; the lodge is superior to the Noble Grand; the S. G. S., is superior to the Grand Sire. As a rule the subordinate lodge has the jurisdiction to decide any question which can properly come before it. No lodge, however, has a right to decide any question in reference to the worth of the order, written or unwritten.

Lotteries and gift enterprises for worthy objects of the order are declared illegal.

The death of Past Grand Sire John W. Stokes is feelingly alluded to.

British Columbia is alluded to as follows: Excelsior Lodge No. 7, at Chilliwhack, owns a cemetery lot, which cost with improvements $629. The value of assets throughout the jurisdiction exceeds $80,000. Victoria Lodge No. 1, has paid to four of its members about $11,000 since 1875. New Westminster Lodge, No 3, owns jointly with the Masons, a lot and building, the cost of which was, lot (O F) $3875, building (O F) $17,500, total $21,375. Black Diamond Lodge, No 5, Nanaimo, hall improvements $500.

"Nothing conduces more to the healthy growth and permanent prosperity of a lodge than ownership of a piece of real estate. When once a lodge has acquired a home of its own, and in which it takes pride, there is an air of permanence about it which attracts to it outsiders, and it conveys the idea that the institution is of a stable kind. My advice, therefore, is to all lodges, buy land and build you a home."

Odd Fellows' Employment Bureaus are reported as doing much good in furnishing employment to a large number, who otherwise would be without work. St. Louis, Chicago, Buffalo, Rochester, New York and Brooklyn, are specially mentioned in this connection.

He renewed his suggestion of last year to admit to membership young men over 18 years.

Upon the color question the Grand Sire says: "It may be well to have this subject in mind, and see whether in the not distant future the door may not be partially open to admit educated civilized gentlemen who may have in their veins some particles of Indian blood. Too long has it been open already. Half and quarter blood Indian wives of Odd Fellows may be admitted to membership in our Rebekah Degree Lodges; but their offsprings could not, if sons, nor could daughters unless married to Odd Fellows.

Grand Sire White deprecates the constantly multiplying of degrees and ceremonies connected with the Order.

Rep. Charles W. Busbee, of Raleigh, N. C., was elected on the fifth ballot Deputy Grand Sire.

Rep. McColl writes that the Canadian Rep. intend visiting Victoria, returning to their homes via the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The Reward for Tascott.

The reward of $20,000 for the arrest of Wm. B. Tascott, offered by Mrs. Snell, of Chicago, is to be more widely circulated than any former offers. A circular, containing a description of Tascott and a sample of his handwriting, will be mailed direct to every postoffice in the United States and Canada, numbering between 60,000 and 65,000, a matter of $6,500 for postage, folding, etc. The circular is to be printed in German, French, Spanish, Italian, Swedish and Norwegian, and sent to most of the prominent postoffices in Europe, Asia and South America. It is probable that inside of thirty days from date more people will have heard of the reward and have more interest in the affair created thereby than ever was before in any similar case.

The Free Press makes a savage attack on the Government for the failure of the negotiations.
